

Monsters In My House

Colin M. Drysdale

Draw Your Own Monsters In My House is the first book in the Draw your Own ... series from Pictish Beast Publications. This series is designed to help children, aged four and older, develop their word interpretation skills, especially for the evocative 'wow' words that help bring writing to life, their drawing and coordination skills, and their imaginations, all while having fun.

From the back of the book: "My house is full of weird and wacky monsters that live in all sorts of strange places.

"If I tell you what they look like, will you draw pictures of them for me?"

Dr Colin – The Cryptozoologist

There are twelve monsters in Dr Colin's house. In this book, you'll find amusing rhymes about eleven of them which describe what they look like and where they live. Your job is to draw pictures of them for Dr Colin based on these descriptions. For the twelfth monster, you need to imagine what it looks like, write your own rhyming description and then draw a picture of it.

As well as being an educational activity book for children, this book is also a resource for educators looking to help their students develop their language skills. To aid with this, this book is supported by an optional educator's licence that allows educators to legally photocopy its contents to create classroom hand-outs and suggestions for additional fun classroom activities to accompany them (available through the publisher's website).
